New distress device...

...gives firemen a

Disoriented in heavy smoke with his air regulator running out of oxygen, Los Angeles City fireman Lynn Hazlett failed to make his way out of a burning industrial building in North Hollywood.

The other fireman didn't know he was in trouble. Hazlett died in the blaze.

That incident in 1980 sparked firefighters to press for a reliable personal alarm device that could summon aid even when a fallen fireman couldn't, Los Angeles City Assistant Fire Chief Peter mucarelli said.

The result is by Sept. 30, all the state's 52,200 firefighters who go into toxic situations wearing air-packs, will clip to their gear a cigarette-sized box that emits a shrill distress signal when activated.

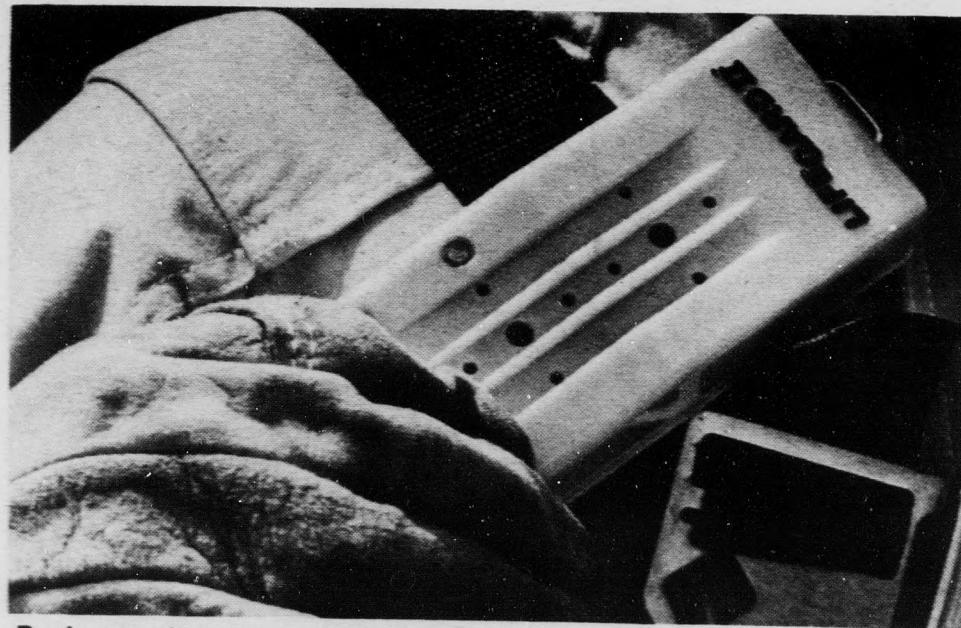

Seven California firemen died on-duty in 1982. State Fire Marshall statician Janet Stark couldn't say how many of those deaths could have been prevented with personal alarm devices.

Upland fireman tried out the new gadget last week and will employ it shortly after they are trained in its use, Division Chief Don Johnson said.

Los Angeles firemen started snapping the alarm onto turnout coats two months ago, Lucarelli said.

The alarm device is intended to improve the odds of rescuing a downed fireman, "to rectify a situation that's

During a simulated drill, stricken firefighter (top photo) Rick Wilson collapses beside crates in an Upland packing house. Wilson (above) buckles on a personal alarm device. On the cover: Firefighter Mike Munoz is equipped to enter the building where Wilson has fallen.

Munoz (right photo) is able to locate the downed colleague amid the obstacles of a bunk room by using the shrill alarm for direction.

already gone wrong," Johnson said.

Whenever a fireman is in a situation where he needs to strap on a 36-pound air-pack, such as a structure fire or an unknown substance leak, the alarm will go with him, Johnson said.

The alarm responds to lack of movement.

If a firefighter is at a standstill for 25 seconds, the box emits a warning buzz and can be de-activated by shifting one's weight or jiggling the box. If six seconds later the firefighter still hasn't moved — if he's blacked out or fallen down a shaft — the buzzer sounds a shrieking 105 decibel alarm that will not stop until it's manually turned off.

"It's a clever little set up," Johnson said.

Coincidentally, the personal alarm device, a mandate written into the state labor code by the state Occupational Safety and Health Administration, exceeds Cal-OSHA's own noise standards. The standard says hearing protection should be worn around machinery louder than 85 decibels.

Upland paid about $45 for each one, piggy-backing on an order with most of the county's other fire agencies to get a bulk rate, Johnson said.

The alarm's range, emitting a sound similar to a smoke detector, is affected by variables in building construction and interior obstructions, Johnson said.

Using the old field search method, with arms outstretched, firemen trying to locate a disabled colleague in a big building would take much more than the six minute limit — after which an air-less fireman would suffer permanent brain damage, Fire Capt. John Scanlon said.

During a simulated run, where fallen fireman Rick Wilson lay injured in the basement of a 250,000-square foot citrus packing house, it took about two minutes for his rescuers, Mark Momberg and Mike Munoz, to find him.

"Searching one corner at a time, we couldn't have caught him," Scanlon said.

From behind blackened air masks to simulate poor visibility, the rescuing firemen blindly wandered around the echoing basement stacked with wooden packing crates. They hunched over, as if to avoid roiling smoke above their heads. They made one directional correction and bumped into a basement column before following the shrill sound to Wilson.

After tying a lifeline on the victim, Munoz said "sound was bouncing off the walls, but once you got near, it was more direct."

In the first few minutes after arriving at a fire, with three men on a squad at each of Upland's three stations, a buddy-system, while preferred, just doesn't work, Battalion Chief Phil Watkins said.

"The first poor devils that get there have the job of not letting it progress further without unreasonable risk," he said.

Upland hasn't ever lost a fireman in a blaze. But Watkins said the alarm "is something to make the guys feel more comfortable. We're lucky it hasn't happened yet, but it has the potential" to happen. □

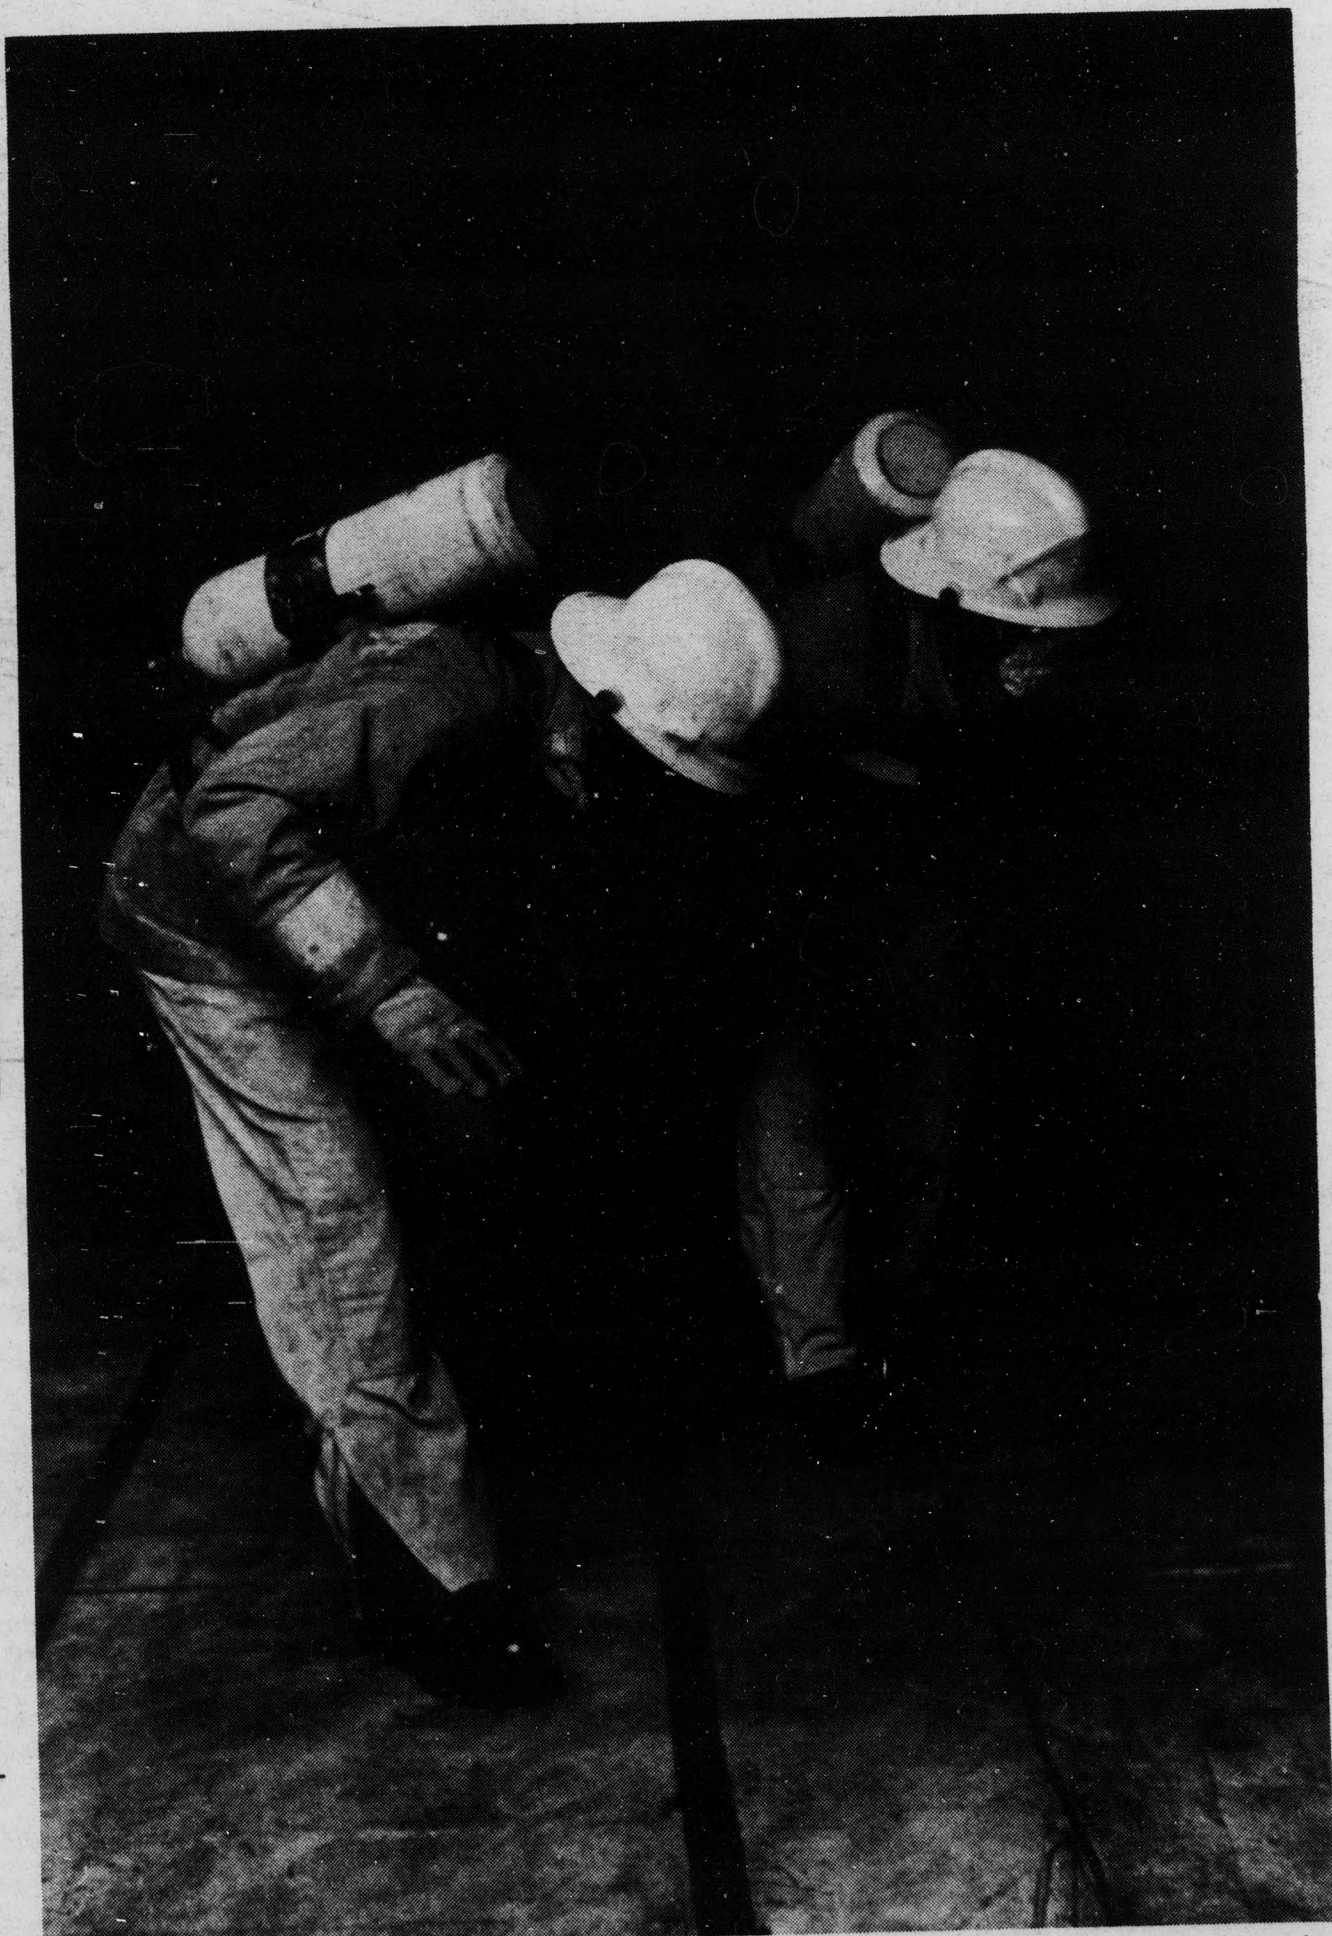

Wilson survived the ordeal.

Animator Timmins was a pioneer in film fantasyland

Reuben Timmins is one of a shrinking band from Hollywood's "Golden Age," a film pioneer who breathed life into two-dimensional storyboards.

The retired special effects animator helped create some indelible images for fantasy film buffs, such as the forest-fire sequence in Disney Studios' "Bambi."

Aside from industry insiders, his anonymous contributions could only be appreciated by those of keen sight, able to read the credit lines at a film's end.

Timmins' 73 years, the latest one spent in an Upland retirement home, coincided with the rise of the movie industry. Like film frames flicking through a projector, he saw U.S. film history unwind.

An East Coast native and a high school dropout, one of his early jobs was as copyboy on the now-defunct New York Graphic. His duties included running coffee and corned-beef dinners to a young columnist, Walter Winchell.

A friend at the newspaper led Timmins to the Manhattan-based Van Beuren Studios cartoon factory, which produced the "Farmer Alfalfa" and "Aesop's Fables" cartoons.

His assistant was Joe Barbera, who later created "Tom and Jerry" cartoons for television with Bill Hanna.

Barbera, now a multi-millionaire, "was working as a bank teller and I gave him a chance," Timmins said.

"In the very beginning in 1927 it was crude. But the scope of creative genius was limitless," he said.

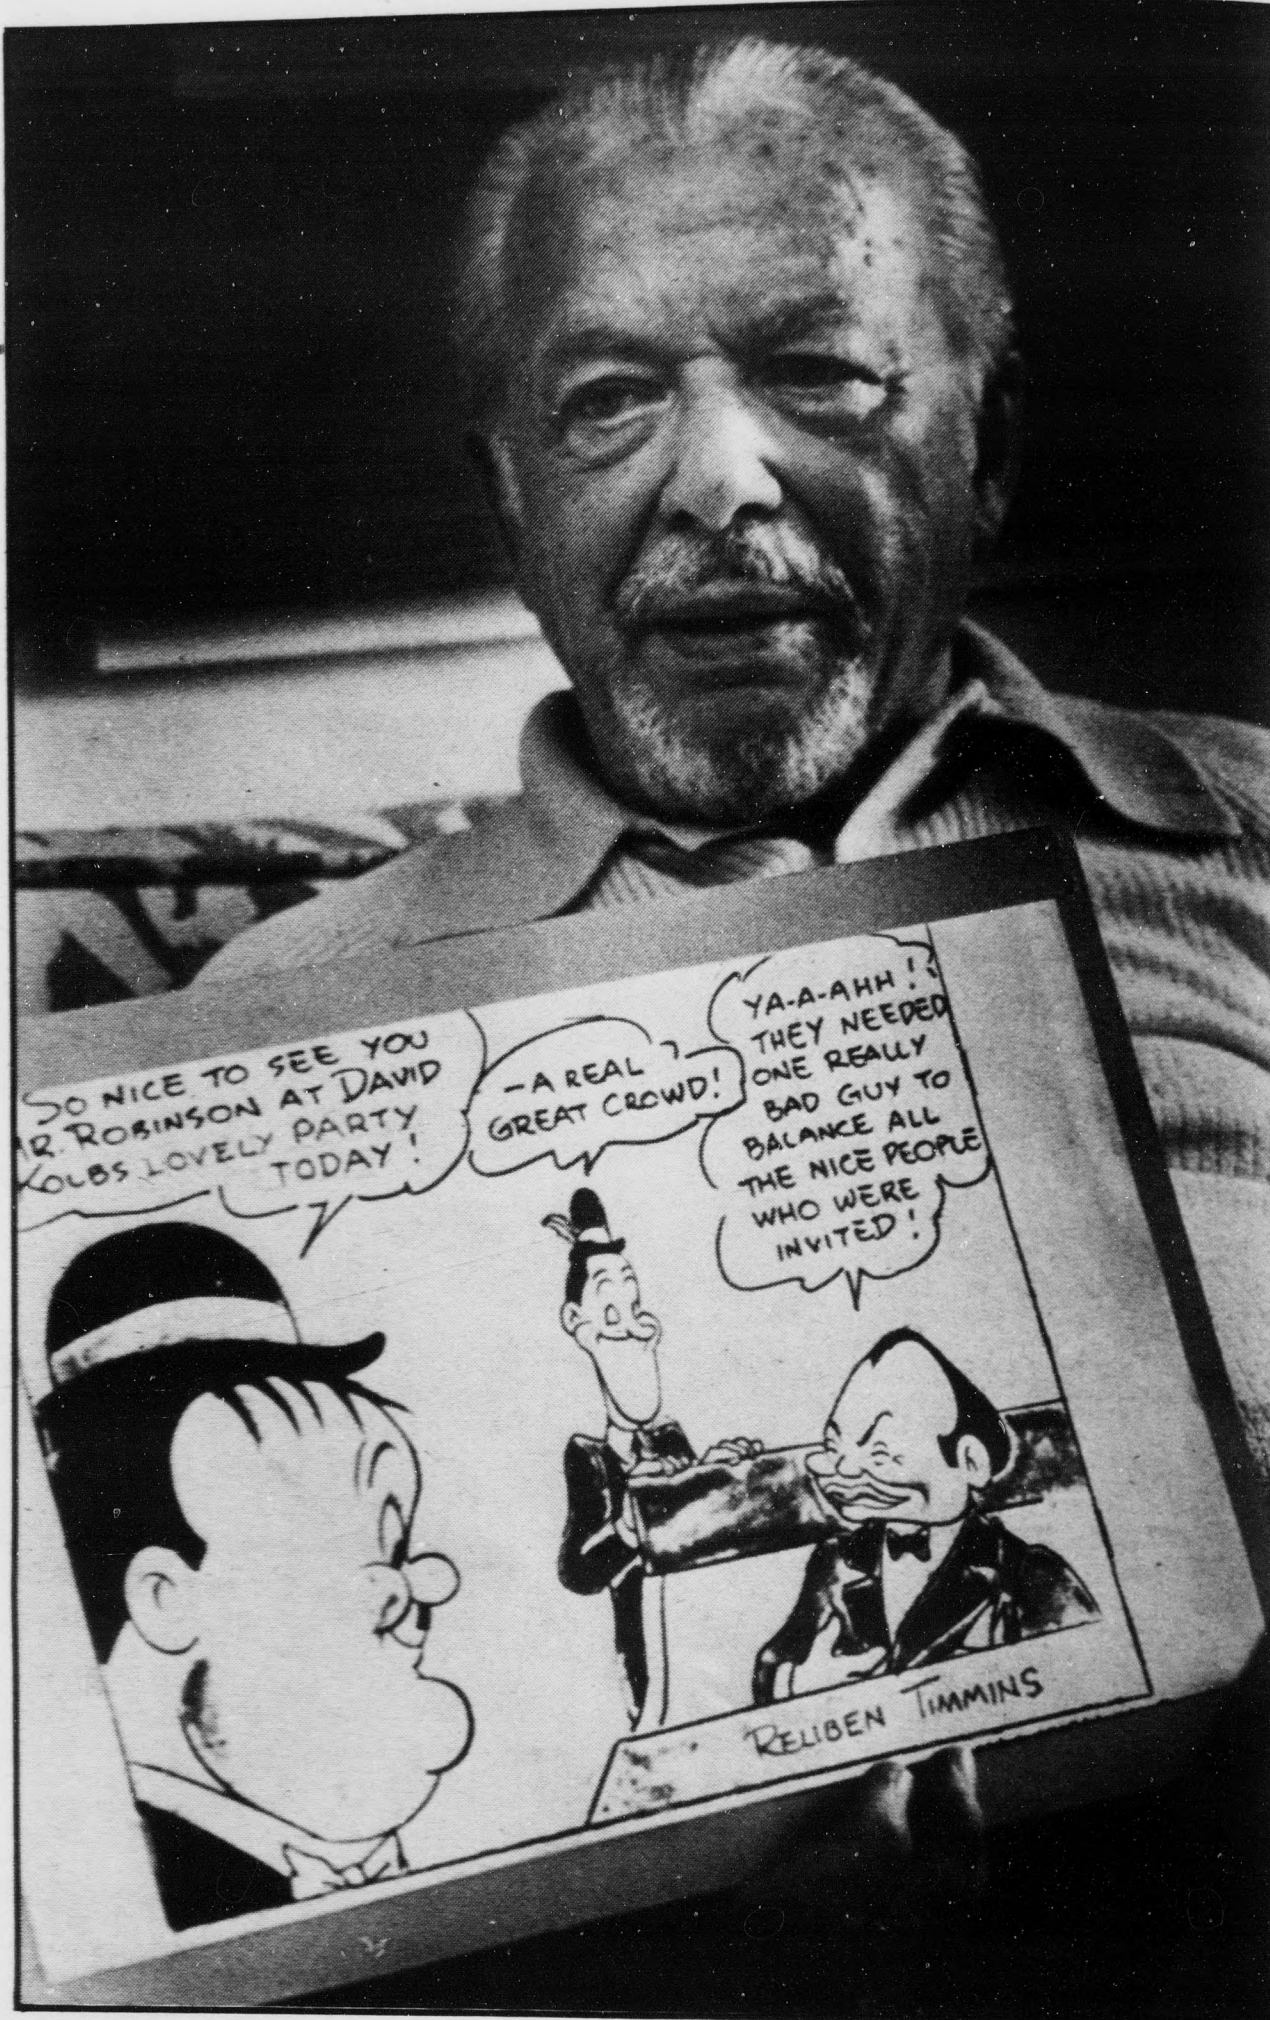

The renowned Walt Disney tapped that genius. Talented animators from throughout the country flocked to Disney Studios, lured by glowing brochures.

"The studio sent out brochures — which I kept — that read 'You can make up to $20,000 a year.'"

"In the late 30s that was fantastic money. But when I got here and joined the studio, one of the oldtimers told me, 'You could drop a bomb on this studio and not hit anybody making more than $100-a-week,'" Timmins recalled.

While Timmins describes the film giant as an exploitive perfectionist, disputing Disney's industry-wide reputation as a paternalistic employer, the animator has nothing but praise for

Long-time volunteer 'Tony' Zenz will speak at YMCA annual meeting

Harold "Tony" Zenz will be guest speaker at the West End YMCA's annual meeting to be held Wednesday, May 18, at the West End YMCA.

The banquet, celebrating the YMCA's 79th year in Ontario, will honor outstanding achievements by this year's Sustaining Campaign program volunteers for the West End and Chino Family YMCA and recognize the achievements of members of the YMCA board of directors, YMCA President Joe Kamansky said today.

Zenz, a former YMCA board member, was born in Ontario in 1910. He attended Chaffey High School, Chaffey College and the University of Southern California. He excelled in sports during his school days and captained the Chaffey baseball team. During the mid-1920's, Zenz was active in the city night softball league where games were held on the grounds where the West End YMCA now stands.

An Ontario resident for 40 years, Zenz is retired from Safeco Title Ins. where he was an executive for nearly 19 years. Prior to that, he served as a public official for San Bernardino County as the first county planning director and later as the county's first chief administrative officer. Zenz began his 35 year career in government in 1935 and served until 1958 when he joined Safeco.

Along with his successful career in both the public and private sector were many years of community and church service. He was on the Ontario-Montclair School Board for 13 years with 10 years as chairman.

In 1967, Zenz was awarded the city of San Bernardino's "Man of the Century" award for outstanding service to the community.

Zenz will speak on "Proverbs 29:18 'Where there is no vision, the people perish' — A Quotation is not Enough."

The public is invited to the meeting and banquet which will start at 6:30 p.m. with a social hour and feature a charcoal-broiled steak dinner at 7 p.m. Cost for the event will be $10 per person.

Persons interested in attending should contact the West End YMCA at 986-5847 by May 11 to reserve a space.

The West End YMCA is located at 215 W. C St. in Ontario. The West End YMCA is a member agency of the West End United Way.

Shelby Forrest grew up with Upland School District

By David Miller

You could probably say that Shelby Forrest "grew up" with the Upland School District.

In 1949, he was a fourth grade teacher at Upland Elementary School at a time when there was only one other school in the district — Upland Junior High.

After being recalled to active duty the following year, he rejoined the school district corps in 1955, coming home to Upland Elementary to teach in the sixth grade. By that time, the district had two additional schools, Sierra Vista and Baldy View.

"The following year (1956), I went to Upland Junior High, and I stayed there as a teacher and counselor until 1960, at which time I was appointed principal at Foothill Knolls," Forrest says.

Foothill Knolls officially opened on January 1961, and a month later Forrest, apparently not one to sit still for long, was also appointed to the principal's post at Pioneer Junior High, which had also just opened.

From 1962 to 1977, he served as principal of Pioneer only and it was at that point, ready for a change of scenery but certainly not a change of cities, Forrest requested and was appointed to the position of principal at Citrus Elementary School.

"I wanted more elementary time, a little more class time, and I wanted a little more closer contact with the students and the teachers," he says.

But now, for Shelby Forrest, who will be 60 in July, a lengthy career is about to come to an end. Effective July 1, Upland School District's longest-serving employee will become a former district employee. His retirement from the district coincides with his retirement from the military, and Forrest has decided to quit while he's ahead and still has a few good years left in him.

A native of Hot Springs, Ark., he has lived in the same house — about a half mile from Citrus Elementary — for 27 years. All three of his children have gone to school there.

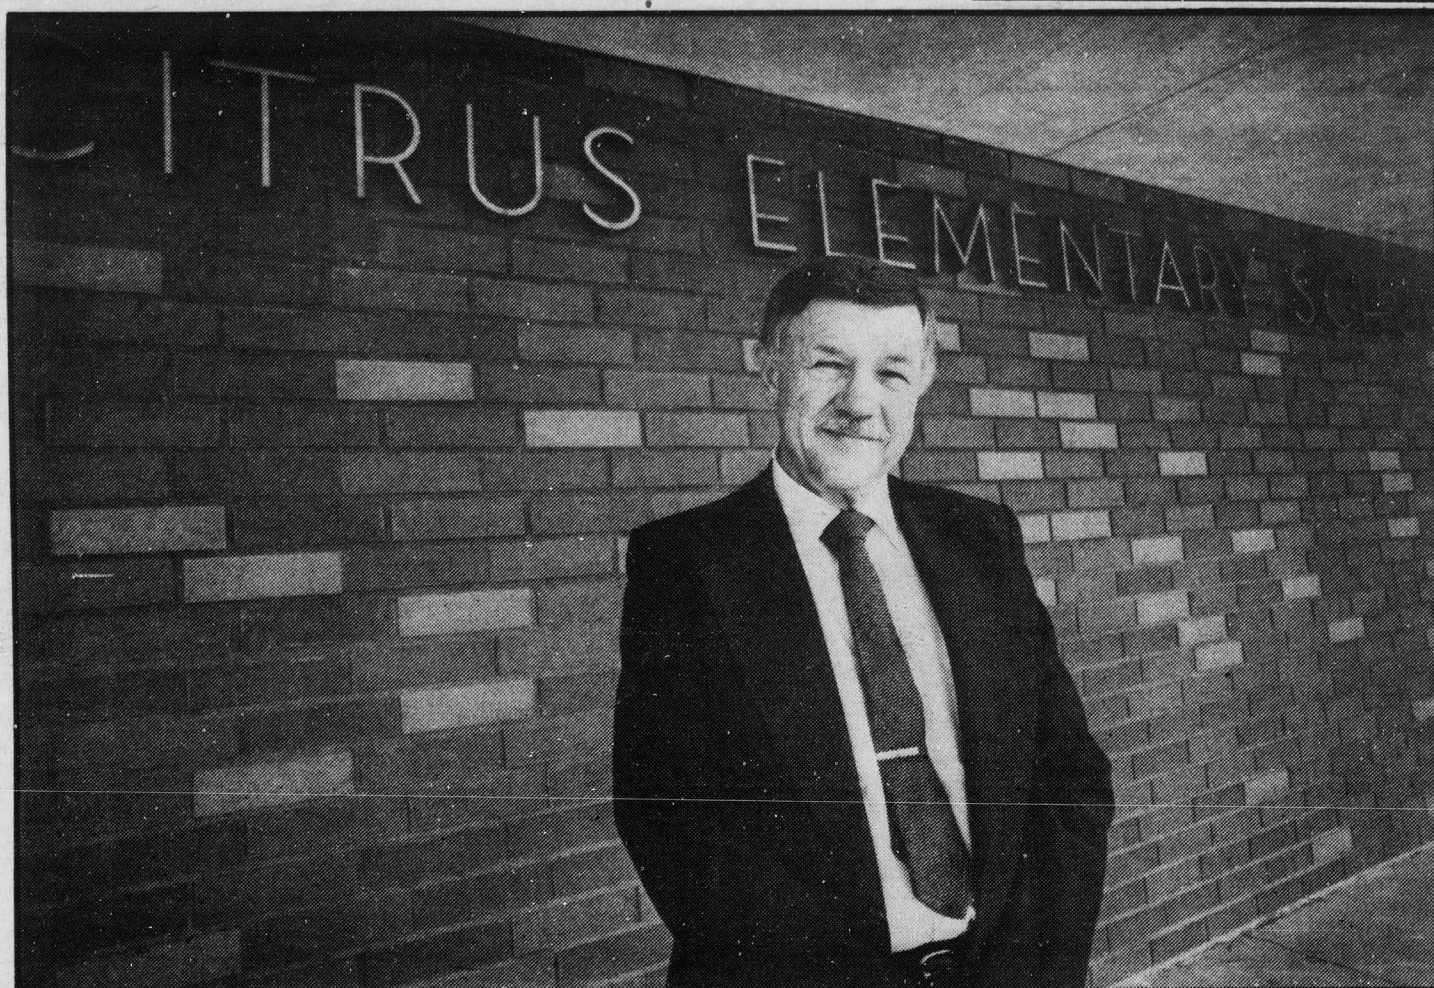

The district and its board of education will be honoring him in June. "He arrived here when the district was relatively small, has gone through just about all of its growth and has served very well at a number of its schools," said Superintendent George Renworth.

In good physical condition, thanks to a steady program of exercise, Forrest plans to spend his remaining years traveling to Japan, local golf courses and other green pastures.

Wife Gloria, a registered nurse at San Antonio Community Hospital, will be ready to join Forrest in the ranks of the retired in about two more years.

He says he's got a lot of fond memories, but he isn't going to have regrets. "I feel it is the right time to leave," Forrest says. "I've watched the Upland School District grow

'Do-it-yourself' projects needed in government

Sue Goggin
Upland High School
Civics instructor

Although economists tell us there is light at the end of the tunnel, those of us involved with public agencies know that the belt-tightening which started with Proposition 13 is not about to end. The taxpayers continue to say with their ballots that they want better use of their money by all levels of government. This can create "hard times" or creative opportunities, depending on how we approach the situation.

The greatest opportunity is for a new partnership between citizens and the agencies of government which serve them. For too many years we have yielded our ability to control government by blindly asking for more and more services. Should we wonder that government has become so expensive? If we are to correct the condition, we must think in terms of more "do-it-yourself" projects in government, as a budget-minded householder does when seeking to cut his costs.

In the schools, this means more parent involvement. If we don't want to give our time. Families must become more involved in providing educational experiences at home, freeing school time for those academic subjects which can best be taught in a school environment. Let mom and dad take the kids to the zoo, while the teacher concentrates on the principles of biology. Let mom and dad expose junior to the places where they work and the attitudes necessary for a good employee, while the teacher concentrates on the written and mathematical skills needed to perform on the job. Let mom and dad volunteer time at school both in and out of the classroom, so everyone will know education is something we value highly.

In government, citizens must truly "ask not what their country can do for them, but what they can do for their country," especially at the local level where budget cuts have been the quickest and deepest.

The recent Viewpoint on Promote Animal Welfare and Safety was a good example of how people in a community can unite to benefit a good cause. Some of those marginal services which government has provided in the past will have to be assumed by other organizations on a volunteer basis, such as maintenance of youth sports facilities, services to senior citizens; and library support. Why couldn't service clubs "adopt a park?"

Hard times can create opportunities for better times if we are willing to work at it. There is great satisfaction in direct involvement, and perhaps we should require annual public service time for all adults. Government "of the people, by the people, and for the people" is an idea whose time has come again.

Viewpoint offers Upland residents the chance to speak up on matters of interest to the community.

City Beat: What Upland agencies are doing

Environmental Review Board

Environmental Review Board, composed of City Manager Lee Travers, Engineer Fred Blanchard and Planning Director Bill Young, took the following actions on April 21:

Continued an environmental review of Western National Properties' 130-unit apartment complex on 4.5 acres, south and west of the southwest corner of Mountain and Arrow Highway, pending receipt of cost/benefit information and integrating mitigating measures into the proposal.

Concluded an initial study for an apartment complex by Matreyek Homes of Upland was incomplete and asked for a fiscal analysis. The builders proposed a 535-unit apartment complex on 45 acres east of Campus Avenue, north of the Upland Hills Country Club, land that is now zoned for heavy industry and as open space.

Required an environmental impact report on a proposed development of 16 homes on 10 acres located on the east side of Euclid between 19th and 20th Streets. The project is located within the right-of-way for the proposed Route 30 freeway.

City Council

City Council items acted on Monday included:

Awarded a street extension project to low-bidder CATRAC Construction, an Upland firm that bid $19,000 to extend 18th Street west of Wilson Avenue to Benson Avenue.

Approved renewing alcoholic beverage licenses for two Upland Stater Bros. Markets.

Gave final approval to C/L Builders parcel map for a commercial building proposed at Foothill Boulevard and Mountain Avenues.

Accepted a surety bond from DeSalvo Investments on renovating a car wash at 325 E. Foothill Blvd.

Accepted surety bonds from Leo G. Valades and McElvany Insurance on a single family home being built at 153 E. Ninth St.

Accepted surety bonds on parkway trees planted in a Benson and Wilson Avenues housing tract built by G. Miller Development Co.

Approved a tract map for a Upland Partners' five-acre shopping center proposed for the southeast corner of Foothill and Campus Avenue.

Ordered the abandonment of the end of south Huntington Drive, east of Central Avenue.

Resolved to support putting on November's ballot a West Valley flood control assessment measure similar to Proposition W, defeated by voters last November.

Planning Commission

The Planning Commission took the following actions of April 28:

Denied a request by Robert Ferro for a waiver that would have allowed him to keep a wall he built in front of his Tapia Way house that is two feet higher than permitted by code. Ten property owners petitioned in opposition. Vote: 7-0.

Granted a waiver to allow David Jones to build a room addition on the rear of his Comet Way home even though it encroaches about eight feet on the minimum yard setbacks. Jones' two neighbors supported his request. Vote: 7-0.

Gave conditional approval to Dunlap Auto Sales' request to use six parking stalls in a customer parking lot to display cars for sale at 80 E. Foothill Ave. Owners of two neighboring businesses objected. Vote: 5-1-1, with John Zinda voting "no" and Rosalie Kamansky abstaining.

Granted a request by Best Western Equipment of Orange to operate a dry cleaners in a proposed shopping center at Foothill and Campus, subject to 12 conditions.

Granted a conditional use permit for a proposed energy recovery station and electrical power facility in the former city landfill on Campus. Vote: 6-0.

Continued discussion of design on the proposed Foothill Freeway until the May 26 meeting.

It's a woman's world, too

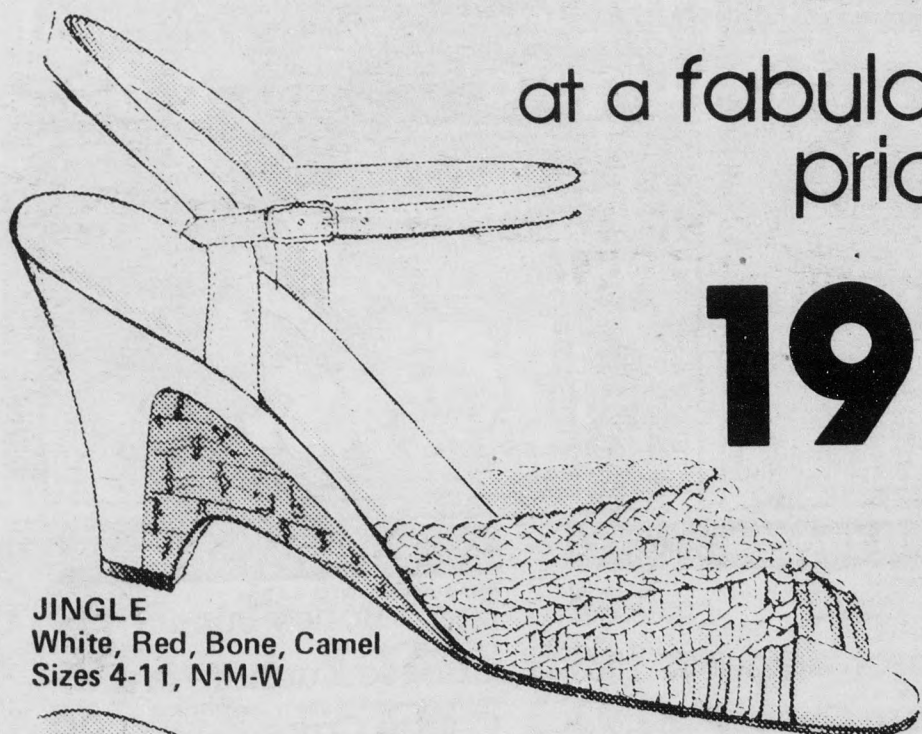

"Women in a Men's World" will be the topic of Romero Buick Finance and Insurance Manager Linda Hill's talk to Chaffey High School students at 9:50 a.m. Wednesday, May 11.

Ms. Hill will discuss what it's like to be in a predominately male profession, touching upon the opportunities, rewards and problems.

New appliances save on gas usage

Consumers who select new, more efficient gas appliances can save up to 50 percent in operating costs, according to the American Gas Association.

Improvements in the efficiency of natural gas water heaters, dryers, ranges and home heating systems combined with conservation can go a long way toward making it possible for consumers to control rising utility bills, AGA says.

National average annual energy costs released in the Department of Energy's latest "Energyguide" show that in 1981 natural gas cost consumers $5.48 per million Btus (MMBtu) while number 2 heating oil cost $8.85 per MMBtu and electric heat cost $19.78 per MMBtu.

Important consideration

Every home appliance has two costs: one, the initial price, and two, the lifetime operating cost. With a new, more efficient gas appliance, lower lifetime operating costs can save the user enough money to pay back a good share of the initial cost.

AGA says that "most new energy-efficient gas appliances have pilotless gas appliances have pilotless ignition, instead of continuous-burning pilot lights. Some ranges offer convection ovens which circulate hot air around the food to accelerate cooking time and save gas. Gas water heaters feature more insulation, improved burners and more efficient heat transfer.

"New gas furnaces have automatic vent dampers to eliminate heat loss when the unit is off. The less air that escapes, the warmer the house stays and the less often the furnace is required to run. This, in turn, save consumers money. Using a new furnace with a vent damper and pilotless ignition can significantly reduce the expense of heating a house," says AGA.

A new generation of condensing gas furnaces is now available that takes the heat which normally goes up the venting chimney and puts it through a different kind of heat exchanger. The new pulse gas furnace is one kind of condensing furnace that is rated 91 percent to 96 percent efficient.

Numbers talk

The annual 1981-dollar operating cost of a pulse gas furnace is approximately $501 per year and represents a $235 yearly saving over conventional gas furnaces, a $426 yearly saving over oil furnaces and a $1,070 yearly saving over electric resistance furnaces. The estimated saving over an electric heat pump is $285 per year.

Energy-saving features

New gas ranges for home cooking have energy conservation features which save time as well as help control utility bills. According to the AGA, a gas range with an intermittent ignition system, instead of the old continuous-burning pilot light, can cut up to one-third off a consumer's cooking bill. Add a convection oven that circulates heat around food and the cook can save even more time, energy and money.

New gas clothes dryers can save consumers up to $120 in lifetime operating costs with energy-saving features such as pilotless ignition and automatic shutoff. The dryers require very little upkeep and can be maintained in a matter of seconds.

The AGA says today's gas hot water heaters have improved design features. These include double-thick insulation, energy-saving burners and more efficient heat transfer. The latter allows them to heat the same amount of water with only three-fourths of the gas than with previous models.

Class at Chaffey to discuss problems of growing old

The second course in a series of three which are addressing the problems of growing old will meet May 13 and 14 in Room 2 of the Social Science Building at Chaffey College, 5885 Haven Ave., Rancho Cucamonga.

"Older Workers: Retirement and Employment Issues" is the title of the one-unit course which will feature Arthur Madorsky, M.D., as one of the principal speakers on preventive measures to help control cardiovascular disorders such as heart attacks and strokes.

Also speaking to the class will be registered dietician Barbara Schonfeld, who will cover nutrition and its effect on health in the later years. Kay Moore will cover some of the psychological and social aspects of growing old and Bowers Companies representative Ealr Peyatt will demonstrate health care equipment available for home use.

Shirley Conger, the instructor of the course, is a social worker and gerontologist who has consulted in hospitals and nursing homes. The goal of the course is to help students formulate their individual retirement plans.

For information about registration, contact the admissions office of the college, call 987-1737 or register the first day of class.

Spanish teacher keeps students on their toes

By David Miller

Paul Robertson is one teacher who doesn't mind when his students talk in class. His only requirement is that when they do speak, it better be in Spanish.

Robertson, 32, a Spanish instructor at Upland High School, believes that students who want to learn a foreign language should learn it correctly. With a nod to the adage "practice makes perfect," Robertson not only tests his students inside the classroom, but they're also likely to get a surprise quiz if they encounter him around campus.

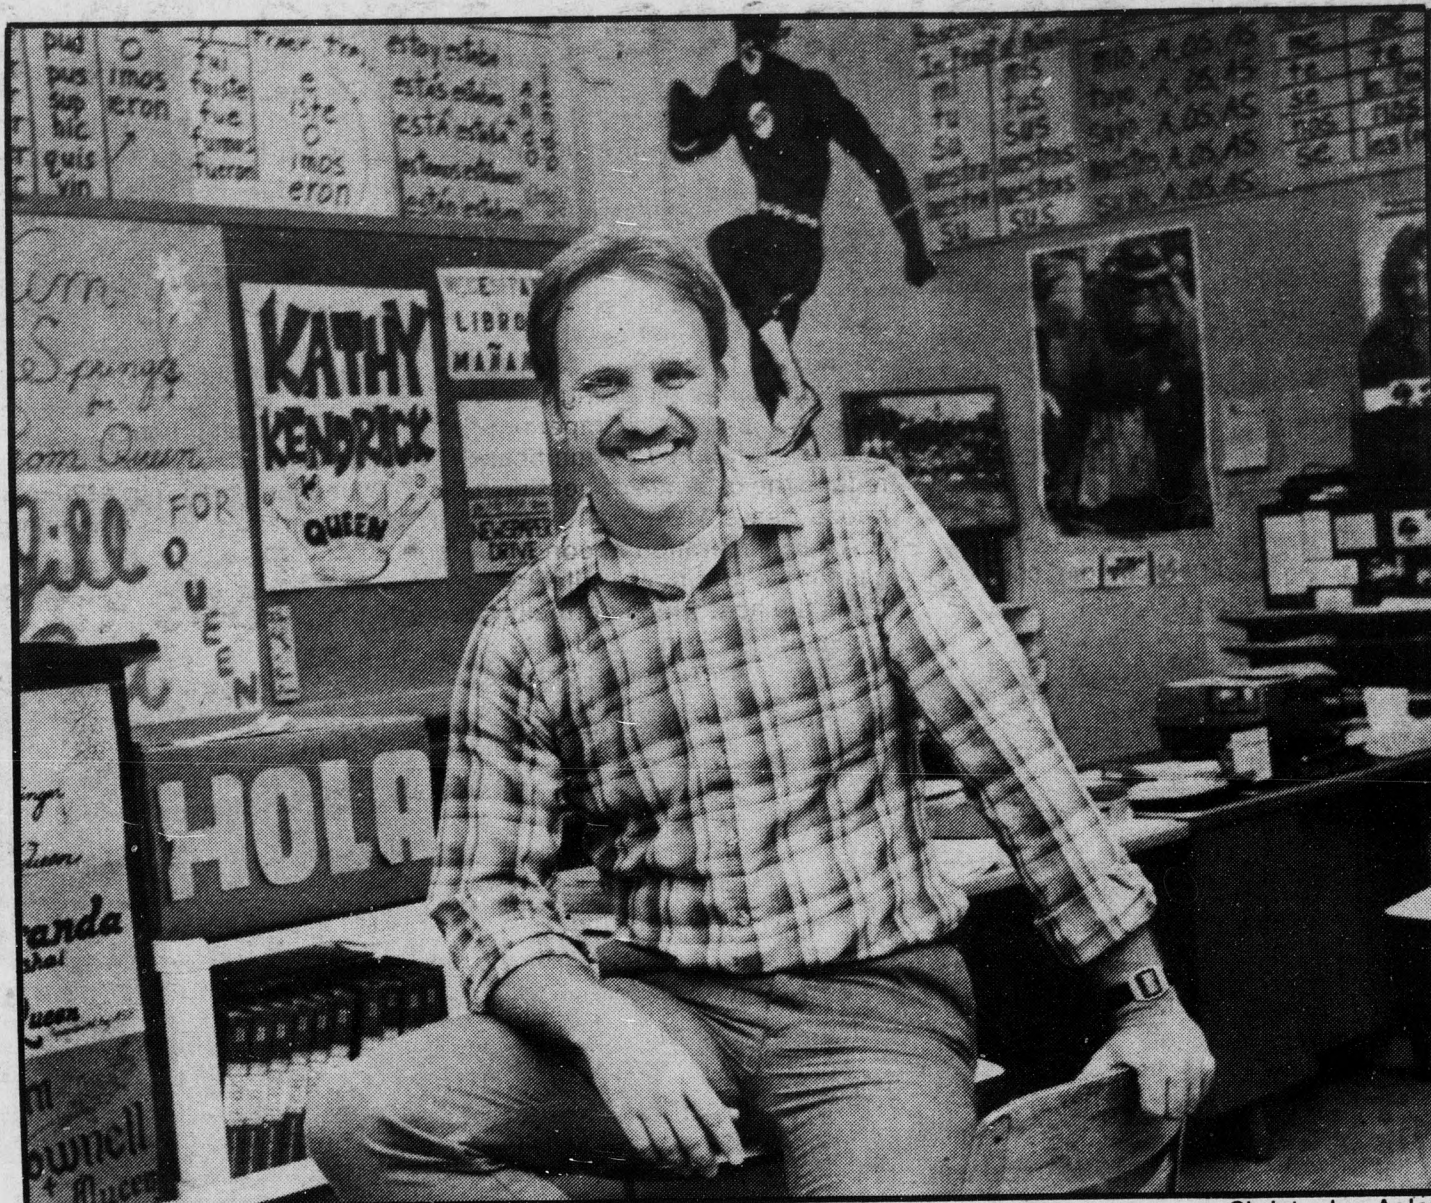

And to give them real-world experience in using what they've learned, each year he takes his classes to the city of Caborca in Sonora, Mexico.

As if that were not enough, Robertson, who graduated from Upland High, tests former students whom he meets on the street to see how much Spanish they have retained. By example, he hopes to share his love for the language with other people.

"He's an exemplary teacher," says UHS Principal Glenn Fisher. "He enjoys his work, he's enthusiastic and dedicated and he sets high standards for his students. He expects them to achieve."

Robertson also serves as Upland's unofficial school photographer, shooting pictures at various athletic events, rallies and other campus activities.

Upland Mayor's Prayer Breakfast planned Monday

The third annual Upland Mayor's Prayer Breakfast is to be held Monday, beginning at 7 a.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, located at 869 N. Euclid Ave.

Raymond L. Schmutz, former linebacker of the Oakland Raiders and now pastor of Life Bible Fellowship in Upland, will be the speaker.

A limited number of $5 tickets, with proceeds paying for the breakfast and a gratuity for the speaker, can be purchased through the mayor's office in City Hall, 460 N. Euclid Ave., or through the First Church of the Nazarene, 120 W. Ninth St.

"It's an opportunity for pulling the community together on an interdenominational effort," said First Church of the Nazarene Rev. Don Peterman.

The event has been sponsored by the five-member chaplains corps of the Upland Police Department, and will coincide with President Reagan's proclamation of 1983 as the year of the Bible, Peterman said.

"This is our way of sharing that," he said.

Columnist Jack Smith to speak

Columnist Jack Smith will be the featured speaker May 13 at the Friends of Upland Library annual dinner at the Claremont Faculty House, 701 N. College Way.

Smith, a long-time Los Angeles Times columnist, is to give a post-dinner talk after the election and installation of the Friends' officers, assistant treasurer Katherine Thomson said.

The 300 Friends members, organized in 1969, have donated thousands of dollars in equipment, such as a video recorder, typewriter and mini-computer to the Upland Public Library through the group's annual fund raisers.

Dinner theater show planned

Chaffey College Theater Arts Department and the Food Service Management Department present the Annual Dinner Theater production the weekend of May 20 and 21.

Production this year will be "The Diary of Adam and Eve" presented by the Theater Arts Department. Dinner will be served at 7 with the play following. Both the dinner and the play will be presented in the Chaffey College Theater.

Cost for both dinner and theater is $10 per person. Reservations are recommended and may be made by calling 987-1745.

Camp applications available

Applications are now available for Camp Chinook, a summer camp in the San Bernardino Mountains for insulin-dependent children, ages 7 to 16, which is sponsored by the American Diabetes Association, Southern California Affiliate.

Recreational activities include swimming, hiking, overnight camping, archery and canoeing.

The camp staff of nurses, dieticians and physicians work informally with each youngster to improve methods of self-management.

Session I runs June 19 to 30, for ages 10 to 13; Session II is from July 3 to 14 for ages 7 to 10; Session III runs from July 17 to 28 for those 14 to 16; and the final Session IV is set for July 31 to Aug. 11 for those ages 10 to 13.

It's time for renewing S.B. County dog licenses

Annual renewal of San Bernardino County dog licenses started Sunday.

The county's Animal Control Services Program will provide low-cost dog licensing and vaccination clinics until July 31.

Private veterinarians will give rabies vaccinations at a cost of $3. Fees for licenses are $15 for a regular license and $5 for a spayed or neutered dog license, provided a spay or neuter certificate is presented.

A county ordinance requires every dog 4 months of age or over in the unincorporated areas to be licensed annually. Once a dog reaches the age of 4 months, the owner has 30 days to get the dog licensed and vaccinated. Any person acquiring a dog or moving with a dog into an unincorporated area has 15 days to get the dog licensed by the county. This applies to all dogs, even if they have a current license from a previous residence. All current county licenses expire on June 30, regardless of when they were purchased. After Aug. 1, dog owners face a penalty of $25 for all licenses and the possibility of receiving a citation for violation of the state and county health laws.

Dogs vaccinated in California in 1982 only require license renewal. Their owners may purchase dog licenses through the mail, at a local licensing and vaccination clinic or at the local Public Health Department's license purchasing office.

When obtaining a license by mail, dog owners are asked to enclose the current rabies certificate or last year's license receipt with a check or money order for the correct license fee. They will receive a receipt, rabies certificate and license tag by return mail.

They may mail this information to the Department of Public Health, 351 N. Mt. View Ave., San Bernardino CA 92415. Attention: dog license.

Local license purchasing offices are the Chino Health Department, 13260 Centerl Ave., 627-3649; and the Ontario Health Department, 320 E. D St., 988-1312.

The licensing and vaccination clinic dates and locations are:

as follows: May 27, Mt. Baldy Post Office, 10 to 10:30 a.m.

May 27, San Antonio Heights, Park Street at Mountain Ave., 1 to 2:30 p.m.

June 9, Montclair/Ontario Center, 4650 Howard St., 5 to 8 p.m.

Upland man pioneered modern film techniques

Disney classics such as "Pinocchio," "Snow White" and "Fantasia."

"They were made with Depression money and can't be duplicated," he said.

After five years at the Disney cartoon plant in 1941, Timmins and other restive artists tired of poor pay and long hours went on strike.

In that era, the studios resisted unions. Most cartoon producers, such as MGM and Warners, reluctantly agreed to union representation.

Disney didn't. After five months of picketing and a government-mediated settlement, strikers and non-strikers alike were laid off.

"Millions poured into the studio, but employees didn't share in that golden flow," Timmins said. Anyone with Disney talent could get jobs elsewhere, and Timmins left for other Hollywood cartoon factories. He worked with the Fleischer Studio, producers of Popeye and Betty Boop, and later on Charles Schultz' Peanuts Christmas television special.

He also branched out and began the Laurel and Hardy cartoon books, and tried unsuccessfully to sell Andy Rooney on the same idea.

Twice producers have called him back from retirement. His latest endeavor was a final fire sequence in the multi-million dollar Japanese film "Metamorphosis."

Although two of his contemporaries have revitalized animation, "nowadays, people don't know how to animate," he believes.

According to Timmins, Disney's rivals are now Don Bluth, creator of the fantasy "Secret of NIMH," and Ralph Bakshi, whose credits include the contemporary "American Pop" and "Fritz the Cat."

Rich with memories from the Disney days, Timmins has written a book entitled "Magic Shadow Shapes" that is now in the hands of a New York literary agent. It doesn't blast Disney, just sets out what has been censored from other biographies, he said.

Even in retirement, the irascible animator who is moving to Claremont with his third wife, Leone, plans to syndicate the dozens of cartoons he doodled in pencil during his spare time.

"Someday they will be valuable. I want to be famous while I'm still alive," he said. □

Besides, he's not exactly leaving for good just

In addition to his experience at the different schools, Forrest has also served as president of Upland's teacher and principal organizations as well as of the West End Administrators Association.

"It has been a very pleasant experience," he says. "In all the time I have been here it hasn't been anything but good."

"I enjoyed very much the opening the of the schools that I opened, and I enjoyed working with the junior high school-aged kids."

"You had to have grown with it or you wouldn't last," he adds. "I'm number one in longevity now. I've actually been on site for 29 years, and I'm the last of the last of the old guard that's retiring." □

MOTHER'S DAY

DINING GUIDE

Take your mother out for a fancy dinner Sunday

By Dorothy Joy

Once upon a time, Mother's Day conjured up visions of a smiling aproned lady baking hot apple pies.

Today the woman doing the baking may just as easily be a busy corporate executive, a top-notch secretary or a dedicated teacher.

But, the working mother's family is still all-important, and living up to the world's image of Supermom isn't easy.

Don't you all feel it would be a grand gesture to take mom out to dine and get her out of the hot kitchen on her special day Sunday?

I have some super-special suggestions; read on.

Equi's at 10006 Foothill Blvd., Rancho Cucamonga wants you to bring mom and enjoy the specials being offered. She might like the baked ham or the prime rib. Equi's also features eastern steaks, lobster tail and fresh eastern oyster on the half shell.

For reservations, please call 989-

Socorro's will be presenting a scrumptious brunch. The selection will be difficult; there'll be so many good things spread out for you to choose.

There will be fresh fruit and juices, delightful pastries, crepes, eggs benedict, ham, bacon, sausage plus a grand array of Mexican goodies such as machaca, chorizo con huevo, menudo, rice, beans, salads, shrimp, carnitas and chimichangas. While enjoying all that food, you'll be entertained by strolling Mexican guitars.

Socorro's is located at 10276 Foothill Blvd. in Rancho Cucamonga.

The Capri restaurant at 1353 E. Fourth St. in Ontario would like to help make your mother's special day extra grand. The dinner specials include New York steak, filet mignon, prime rib, top sirloin; your choice for only $5.95. Maybe you're hungry for steak and scampi at $10.95 or steak and lobster for $14.95. Dinner will be served from noon until 9 p.m. Capri

MOTHER'S DAY

DINING GUIDE

Mother's Day celebrates its diamond anniversary

Though mothers have been "mothering" since the Creation, Mother's Day, which honors their selfless dedication, is celebrating its 75th anniversary on Sunday.

It seems that the world took a long time to get around to paying just homage, but the very fact is that Mother's Day grew from an idea into a National Holiday in a matter of just six years! Today, Mother's Day is so widely observed, and so deeply loved, that it is participated in by over 95 percent of all Americans.

Miss Anna Reeves Jarvis, still mourning the passing of her own mother a year after her death in 1906, first told friends of her concept for a Mother's Day, in honor of her mother and all mothers.

That was in Philadelphia, her adopted home. It wasn't long before she won the endorsement and support of civic leaders, chief among whom was John Wanamaker, the Philadelphia merchant-tycoon.

With his support, and that of religious and civic organizations, Mother's Day became a reality in 1908.

The first Mother's Day was unsophisticated and simple, expressed through a sermon preached in Grafton, W.Va., in a small church attended by the Jarvis family when they were living in the area.

By 1910, just two years later, Gov. William E. Glassman of West Virginia gave Mother's Day its first official recognition by proclaiming it a state holiday.

So popular was the observance that it soon transcended local and even state boundaries. By 1913, Congress, in a Joint Resolution, made Mother's Day a national holiday, to be observed the second Sunday of every May — on the anniversary of Miss Jarvis' mother's death.

The Joint Resolution was signed into law by President Wilson, who then issued the first Mother's Day proclamation in 1914, designating that Mother's day be "celebrated in the United States and all its possessions." The rest of Miss Jarvis' life, until her death in 1948, was dedicated to enhancing the importance of Mother's Day, and "policing" the manner in which it would be observed.

So complete was her devotion to the cause that in later years, the concept grew into an obsession which finally distorted her view of the holiday she had "mothered." Miss Jarvis' idea was for a Mother's Day marked by a simple letter of appreciation and perhaps a bouquet of wild flowers, picked from a profusion that blanketed the West Virginia countryside in early May.

And of course, a visit to mother (a very realistic ritual 75 years ago, when families lived in closer proximity to each other than is true today).

But Americans, as is their wont, built on the idea of honoring mother, and substituted greeting cards for letters; gifts of all kinds instead wild flowers (the floral tributes remain an important remembrance option).

And, of course, a telephone call to mother is a "must" — Mother's Day is one of the telephone's busiest, probably only exceeded by Christmas.

By the time Miss Jarvis died in 1948, her homely and humble idea of a Mother's Day had reached international acceptance, highly revered all through the western world.

As the nation moves into the mid 80s, the significance of taking a respite from our computerized lives to tell mothers that their children haven't forgotten, is meaningful to both mother and her children, be they young or old.

Nearly a century after that first Mother's Day sermon, that little church in Grafton, W.Va., stands as a symbol to all the world that mother was, is, and always will be the motivating force in the American socie'

DINING GUIDE

Joan Lunden, daughter chosen as poster family

Joan Lunden, co-host of ABC-TV's Good Morning America, and her 2-year-old daughter were chosen as the 1983 Mother's Day portrait poster family.

They express a contemporary family, active and involved, and reach out to all America through the medium of daily television.

Posters have marked Mother's Day for nearly a half-century, serving to communicate each year's goals, values and aspirations, to all America.

The vibrant character of American motherhood, and the dynamic interaction between modern mothers and their children flows with energy and realism from the photograph with disarming charm, reminding Americans of the date of Mother's Day and its meaning to today's parents.

Ms. Lunden was a 1982 Outstanding Mother, and received her OMA Award at the Fourth Annual Awards Presentations last April. She is also the mother of a new born child, now just 2 months old.

THE MURDER ROOM

Upland High School whips up a batch of farce, mystery, puns and fun.

Just as much, if not more, goes on behind the scenes of a production. Hardin Brothers (center) gives some tips to stage manager Erin Brothers (left) and Donna Knudsen.

Brothers demonstrates a point to a member of

Take a case of mistaken identity, mix with a fortune-hunting woman seeking to murder her wealthy spouse, add a feather-headed stepdaughter and her bungling fiancé, spice with an overly energetic police constable and a dash of a sensible old housekeeper and you have the ingredients of Upland High School's final production of the year, "The Murder Room."

"The Murder Room is a mixture of farce, mystery, puns and a lot of fun," said director Hardin Brothers. "Normally we choose to do something with a little more depth but this time I decided it was time for a play that was just for fun."

The action takes place in a small country estate, Bynewood Cottage. As would be expected, the place is teeming with secret drawers, hidden doors and other unexpected things, all adding, Brothers said, to the complex plot and surprise ending.

After nine weeks of rehearsal, the small cast of six is ready to take center stage for the five scheduled performances on May 12 to 14 and May 19 and 20 in the Upland High School Auditorium.

Cast as the scheming fortune-hunter Mavis Templeton Hollister is Julie Homan. She, Brothers said, has an answer for every problem she faces — with the exception of the return of her husband's ghost.

Playing the true-blue family retainer and housekeeper Lottie Malloy is Chris Shafer. The housekeeper plays a pivotal role in her valiant attempts to keep everyone else on an "even keel" while at the same time helping to solve the mystery.

Mavis' stepdaughter, Susan Hollister, a featherhead who bumbles through everything blissfully unaware, is played by Claudia Purkis,

Barry Draper, Susan's young American millionaire fiancé, is played by Craig Dunkin. Draper who can't make his mind up between his fiancée and her step-mother, also finds time to do a little sleuthing with the housekeeper. The two nearly solve the mystery but then, Brothers said wryly, "forget what they were talking about."

Constable Abel Howard, a well-meaning but slightly ineffective young policeman is played by Joe Brown. He does eventually help to solve the mystery but in the process "succumbs to Susan's idiocies."

Cast as Inspector James Crandell is Richard Romero. Crandell, who is Abel's superior and an apparently sincere upholder of the law never seems to find quite the right clue. But, by the end of the play, Brothers said, his motivations are suddenly made clear.

"This play is pure fun for everyone," Brothers said. "We selected the show because both comedy and characterization are so strong that it will appeal to everyone."

Although there is seating for 1,100 in the auditorium, Brothers seats his audience on the stage with the actors. "I always do that," he said. "In a building this big, it's difficult for the actors. When the audience is up on the stage, they become part of the play — it's more effective."

Some tickets are available at the reservations are recommended, "With only 90 seats per performance, it sells quickly."

For reservations call Brothers, 981-5261, during school hours. "This has been a group to work with that comes through the performance stage, they become a part of the play — it's much more effective."

Some tickets will be available at the door but reservations are strongly recommended, Brothers said. "With only 90 seats per performance, it fills up quickly."

For reservations, call Brothers, 981-5861, extension 261, during school hours.

"This has been a really fun group to work with and I think that comes through during the performances. □

School of Hard Knocks

Small bumps on the course can cause one to lose control of the bike.

BMX not a missile, just fast-paced sport

By Ron Witt

Talk about your School of Hard Knocks!

Upland has its own version going strong at the Pipeline Skatepark on West Arrow Highway. Or more precisely, behind the Pipeline Skatepark.

That's the spot where youthful enthusiasts (ages 5-17) gather three times a week to race their bicycles in organized fashion over a challenging dirt track.

Most of the competitors manage to stay upright over the winding, 720-foot course that finishes slightly uphill, but spinouts and crashes are also commonplace.

The lure of speed and daring-do on two wheels have area youngsters of both sexes turning out Tuesday and Thursday evenings and Sunday mornings for the racing programs sanctioned by the American Bicycle Association (ABA).

"They (riders) do fall a lot," acknowledges track proprietor Stan Hoffman, "and you think they might be hurt, but usually they're not (helmets, long pants and long-sleeved shirts are required).

"You put difficulties in the track so that it's just not a power race where the strongest kid is going to win.

"For instance, one rider might be able to take a flat sweeper turn easily, and the next rider can never do it. One kid will excell on the high bank, and the next one has difficulty.

"You need a little bit of everything (berms, jumps, bumps, etc.) so it evens the race up."

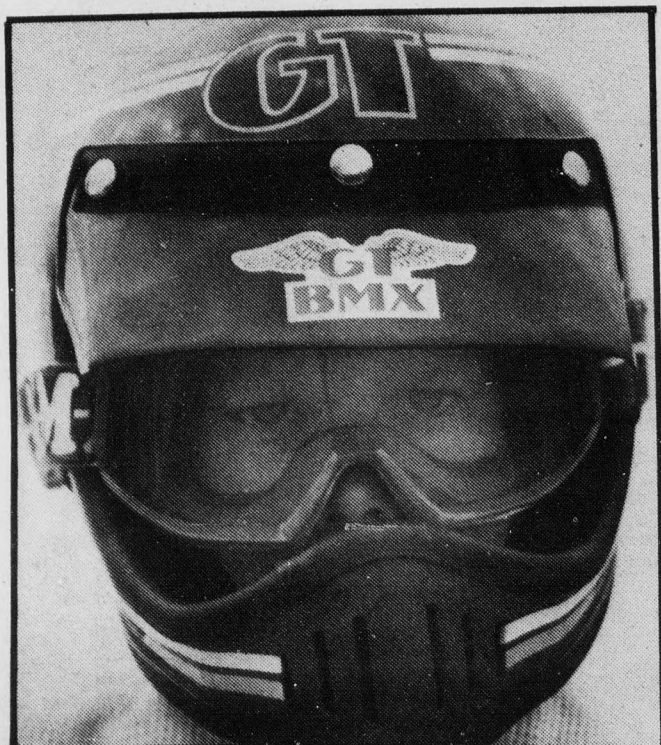

Competition is enhanced by the use of an announcer's tower, starting gate and fast-paced approach to getting the races completed. More than 30 races (qualifying events and mains) are run in a three-hour period at Pipeline on an average Sunday morning, the track's most popular time for competition.

Available is limited bleacher seating for spectators, encouraging parents and relatives to come out and cheer their favorites. A snack bar on the premises does a steady business, and there are restroom facilities.

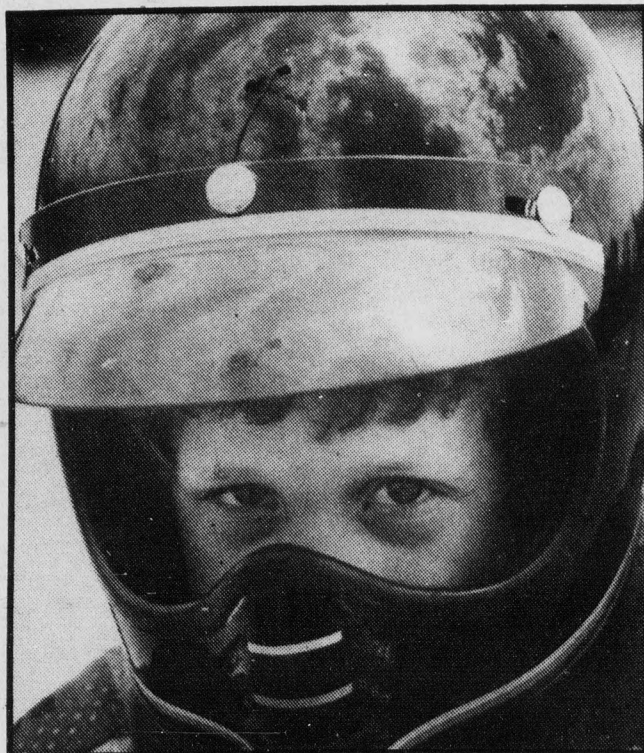

"I really enjoy the tremendous parental support we have," notes Hoffman, who runs the park along with wife Jeanne and five employees. "If we do have 150 riders, there's usually another 300 spectators on hand."

Rough-riding on bikes

The participants, who vie for trophies (first-, second- and third-place finishers are rewarded), gain values other than their $5 entry fee worth of entertainment.

"We have a little temper once in a while," says Hoffman, "but most of the time you see the kids cross the finish line and congratulate each other."

"It's really nice to see that kind of sportsmanship."

Competition can get heated because many riders, whose stripped-down, chrome-alloy bikes may cost $300 and up, are trying to accumulate points on the ABA charts.

Serious riders race several times a week at various sites in quest of the coveted No. 1 plate, which is a measure of both activity and dominance by a rider in an age group.

"No. 1 rider doesn't (necessarily) mean he or she is the very best rider," Hoffman relates, "because unfortunately of how the points can be obtained."

"It can mean how well the parents can afford to take him or her from track to track each week."

Says Jeanne Hoffman on the subject, "I've had parents tell me they've spent anywhere from $12,000 to $25,000 a year on their kids. When there are national races, they might fly to the site and spend the weekend."

Hoffman started the Pipeline Skatepark on the site six years ago when the skateboarding craze was just beginning. The park flourished for a time, then declined in income to the point where the proprietor decided he needed another attraction.

"It was a matter of economics," Hoffman explains. "It was either close down the skateboard park,

His charge to net can be intimidating

By Phillip Barnett

At 6-foot-1 and 195 pounds, Mt. San Antonio College's Dwayne Davis looks better suited crashing into running backs or fighting off double-team blocks than taking swipes at little green balls no larger than eight inches in diameter.

Davis should be growling at somebody across the line of scrimmage instead of rallying with someone on the other side of a net.

Five years ago, Davis made life miserable for any ball carrier that came his way. He was a star linebacker at Upland High School. But due to a back injury, he had no other choice but to hang up his cleats and start wearing shoes with Jimmy Connors' signature on them.

Now he's number one for the Mounties.

Davis chipped a disc in his back while working out with the Upland wrestling team in his senior year. It was a freak accident which he thought was less serious than it turned out to be.

"I was practicing a move and resisted someone else's move real hard and I just fell back crack," says Davis. "I thought I just popped it so I wrestled another week or so before I went to the doctor."

'I still have a real strong urge to play. I really enjoyed football and didn't realize how much it meant to me until I stopped playing.'

Dwayne Davis
Mt. SAC tennis player

"After that, my football career ended right there."

Although he's not bitter about the injury, Davis insists that he would rather be breaking out of someone's huddle than working on his forearm.

"I still have a real strong urge to play. I really enjoyed football and didn't realize how much it meant to me until I stopped playing," says Davis, who was an all-San Antonio League selection.

With football out of the picture, Davis resorted to a sport he hardly had any experience with.

"I used to hit tennis balls a little when I was young, but that's about it," admits Davis.

Aided by girl friend Carol Cox, who plays tennis for Cal Poly Pomona, Davis developed a neat stroke. After hours of practice, he started to play competitively.

"I joined a racket club, practiced some more, played in a lot of tournaments and practiced some more," says Davis, who describes his game as "very bad at the start."

Davis got so good at his new sport that he thought he'd test his skill at the collegiate level. After enrolling at Mt. SAC, Davis was immediately inserted into the No. 2 singles position and No. 1 spot on the doubles team.

He chose Mt. SAC because Bob Holycross, who had been one of Davis' high school football coaches, was the Mounties' tennis coach.

"He's been coaching me for a long time," says Davis. "I knew he was a good tennis coach. That's why I went there."

One year later, Davis became Mt. SAC's top singles player and he kept his spot on the top-seeded doubles team.

As other coaches will attest, Davis, with his Concert Dance Theater, which is the only performing ballet company in the West Valley, hosted last year's festival.

At the festival, the 16 member companies meet for performances and classes led by master teachers.

Concert Dance Theater will perform "Ragtime" choreographed by Maura Riley and "Suite Jazzman" choreographed by JoAnn Warner, artistic director. Dances were selected by an independent master teacher.

"Ragtime" will be performed at the Young Choreographers Concert. Riley, choreographer of the piece, is a member of the theater's senior performing company and a student at Groter School in Ontario. Mary Ingalls, Debbie Smith and Roy Ramsey, all members of the senior company, will dance the original ballet.

Some of those planned include, "A Service Call to the Energy Efficient" presented by the Southern California Gas Co., "How to Hang Your Own Wall Coverings" by Wallpapers to Go, to "Candy Making" by the Sweet Mercantile Co.

All activities are included in the $3 registration fee. In addition each participant will receive a packet containing free literature and maple products. Lunch will be available for purchase by In 'N Out Burgers.

The UHS Parent-Teacher Association liked his photo work so much that the group asked him to shoot pictures at its recent award ceremony, where it proceeded to announce that one of its honorees for outstanding teaching service was Robertson himself.

But PTA award or no, the Montclair resident, who is engaged to Vicki Malich, another UHS teacher, loves his work. Consider the following: He's a photographer who is in much demand around campus and in the community, he teaches nothing but Spanish — his favorite subject — at the high school and at Citrus College, and he's doing it all at his alma mater.

"If I had a chance to teach at any high school in the United States, it would be at Upland High School," Robertson says. "It's a prestigious school for Spanish."

Robertson first discovered that he had a preference for Spanish — and an clear knack for learning the language — when he was in the fourth grade. He began to think about teaching when he was in high school, and the two seemed to go together perfectly.

And when photography became for him more than just a part-time hobby, he became the school's Jack-of-all-trades.

An active supporter of school activities, much of his time is spent at various campus events. He is proud of his part in helping to double the size of the UHS Spanish program, and he has gained some notoriety for his candid photos of campus personalities.

One of his favorite activities is the annual trip to Caborca, which takes place around the time of Memorial Day and is part of a sister city program involving Mexico and the United States (Caborca is Upland's sister city).

Once there, students are given a chance to test their knowledge of the language in real-world situations.

"That's really where you learn the language," says Jesse Desens, one of Robertson's students, "because you're forced to speak Spanish. They speak fast down there, so you really have to listen.

"It's the fastest way to learn. Just being there, you absorb it."

Robertson says that when Desens took his first Spanish class at UHS he could barely speak the language, but now "he could have dinner with the president of Mexico and have a conversation with him and not have any problems — other than digesting the food."

"The Caborca experience has probably done more for the learning of Spanish by Upland High School students than anything else we've ever done."

Robertson, who formerly taught for three years at Cornelia Connelly, a private school in Anaheim, is where he wants to be at this stage of his life. He says that if he weren't teaching he would either want to be a photographer or a sportscaster.

But it also wouldn't bother him if he remains a teacher for a little while longer.

"The key for me is that it is all enjoyable, so it's not all work," Robertson says.

"I get to take pictures and go to all the school's ballgames and teach Spanish, so it's all there." □

ILDC provides job training for disabled

By Matt Coker

Susanne, Ciriano and Drew are not unlike a number of other people in this country. They want jobs.

But there is something special about them and others in the Chaffey College run Independent Life Development Center. They are considered developmentally disabled.

The ILDC creates hope for these students and is one program within Chaffey College which has been recognized as a bright spot in a district experiencing dark economic clouds.

In fact, Ron Dyste, the state administrator of student services and specially funded programs, visited the ILDC last week to find what makes it stand above the rest.

"Among the many strengths of this college, we are taking a careful look at your handicapped program, especially the developmentally disabled program," Dyste told the board of trustees at a recent meeting.

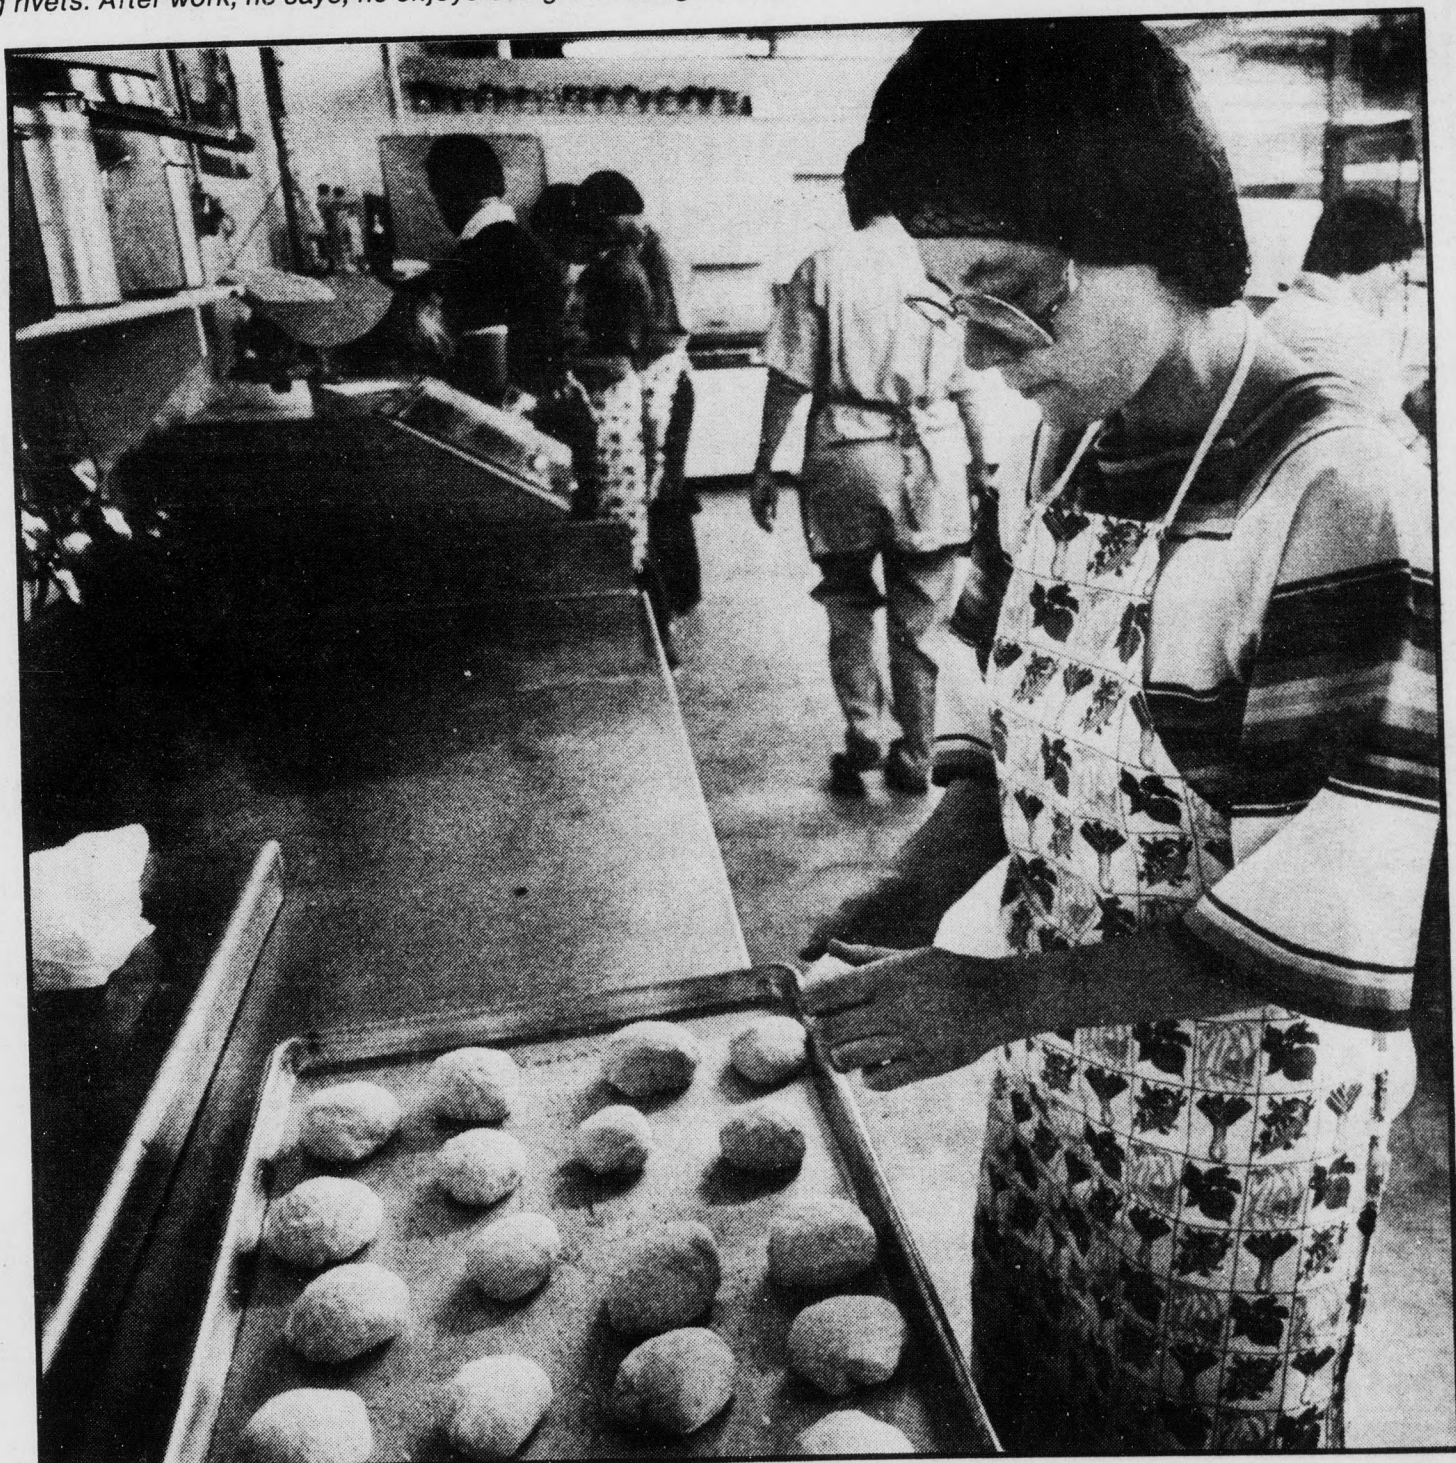

"While there are legislators who wonder should a community college offer this type of school, this is one of the few programs which has a clear placement rate."

"Employers assume developmentally disabled students cannot learn — that's a myth," said Roger Tschirigi, the ILDC placement specialist who is one of those responsible for the center's successful job finding rate. "It may take longer to learn the task, but they do it. They have got to."

"Our students will stick with it," Sharlene Smith, the district specialist said. "That's what employers are looking for — reliability."

Smith said developmentally disabled workers have a lower rate of absenteeism and tardiness and show more job satisfaction than the "typical" worker.

Tschirigi said one problem is people tend to "focus on the disability rather than the ability." Erasing that tendency is the goal of the ILDC.

Susanne helps herself and everyone else at the center by getting food service training and making part of the day's lunch.

"I'm ready to get a job anytime," Drew said as he shut off a piece of machinery he was working at a shop near the center. Drew works at the shop five days per week from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"When I first went to ILDC I didn't know nothing. Now I know a lot," he said proudly.
